Future proofing your business in uncertain times

Do you have a succession plan? Should you restructure, cash in your chips or pass the business on to the next generation?

The Tamworth Business Chamber is urging local business owners to future proof their business, ahead of what could be more uncertain times. While spirits have been boosted with welcomed rain across the region, it says NOW is a pivotal time to ensure the right structures and strategies are in place for a secure future.

Chamber President, Jye Segboer says, “Now is the time to prepare. We don’t know what the future will hold. It’s pivotal business owners think to the future and prepare for whatever could lay ahead.”

Future proofing your business will be one of the key topics covered at the 2020 Tamworth Regional Business Summit.

Roberts and Morrow, one of the region’s most respected financial firms will present a series of workshops including Succession Planning – Restructure or Cashing in your chips? And Financial Future Proofing your Business.

Tax Lawyer, Paul Williams will present on Succession Planning. He says this personal and practical workshop will deliver insights into the fundamentals of managing your assets, assist in maximising the value of your business and illustrate why succession planning is important.

He says, “Our workshops will provide case studies designed to help small and medium business owners maximise the benefit of the capital gains tax small business concessions. I’ll step through a high-level summary of strategies to take advantage of and traps to avoid.”

Financial Planner, Kylie Alcorn will present on Financial Future proofing your business. This workshop will cover business and retirement - small business capital gains tax concessions, how to get the most out of your staff and building assets outside the business.

The Summit, to be held on 17 - 19 March 2020, is an opportunity for businesses in the Tamworth Region to come together to build resilience and shape their business during uncertain times.

Chamber President, Jye Segboer says the summit will give local business owners, operators, staff and start-ups access to industry professionals who will give practical, real-life advice to help plan for the future.

“Our aim for the 2020 Summit is to deliver real solutions to real problems for real people.” Said Mr Segboer.
