NSW Finance and Small Business Minister set to bring government perspective to 2020 Tamworth Regional Business Summit

Attendees of the 2020 Tamworth Regional Business Summit will have a chance to engage directly with state policy makers, during an EXCLUSIVE Q and A session with the NSW Finance and Small Business Minister, Damien Tudehope and NSW Better Regulation and Innovation Minister, Kevin Anderson.

Tamworth Business Chamber President, Jye Segboer says the Small Business Minister's visit to the region is critical, when so many small business owners are still struggling.

He says, "From drought to bushfires and even floods - the north west region has seen it all. While recent rain has boosted spirits and business confidence, Tamworth's water crisis is far from over. Small business owners are hurting and many are turning to the State and Federal government for support."

The Q and A session will be held on day two of the 2020 Tamworth Regional Business Summit and will discuss government policy around drought assistance. It will also delve into strategies the New South Wales government is using to ensure the state's economy continues to thrive.

Minister Tudehope said Tamworth had a thriving and vibrant small business community.

"Tamworth, much like the rest of NSW, is powered by entrepreneurs and mum and dad operators who help provide local jobs and the everyday services and contribute so much to our economy.

"Notwithstanding the recent rains, we know regional towns are doing it tough because of this ongoing drought and the NSW Government wants to do whatever it can to support these communities.

"I am looking forward to hearing the concerns and experiences of small business owners at this Summit," Mr Tudehope said.

The Q and A session will be a chance for business owners to have their questions asked and answered.

Chamber President Jye Segboer says, "The minister will be here to answer your questions. This discussion will provide small business owners and attendees of the summit with an incredible opportunity to have their voices heard."

He says, "This is a chance to find out what the state government is doing to help those impacted by drought and ensure the economy survives. I urged everyone in Tamworth's business community to get their tickets now!"
